INTRODUCTION:

The word „ethics“ is derived from the listen word „ethicus“ and the Greek word „ethiko“ meaning character or manners. This meaning can also be extending to imply systematizing defending and recommending concepts of right and wrong behavior. Ethics is this said to be the science of moral, moral principle and recognized rules of conduct.

Most business encounter two types of ethical problems known as overt and covert with bribery, theft, collusion etc. They are clear (Transparent) and reprehensible. Whereas covert ethical situations occur in corporate acquisitions, marketing and personnel policies, capital investment etc. They are complex clear and have deft ethical solutions.

An ideal ethical decision comprises of following virtues.

- Right – Morally correct
- Equitable - Just and equal
- Good - Highest good for concerned
- Fair – Honesty
- Just – Action

The question arises what is the basic relationship between business and ethics. As people are under the notion that business and ethics are incompatible, it is not easy to establish a relationship.

Classical thinkers like “Adam smith” were of the opinion that the objective of any business was to generate profit only, ethics while other thinkers expressed that neither the business was an extension of morality and ethics, nor can business keep it self-faraway from practices of the society where it exists and operator.

OVERVIEW

Business ethics reflects the philosophy of business, one of whose aims is to determine the fundamental purposes of a company. If a company's purpose is to maximize shareholder returns, then sacrificing profits to other concerns is a violation of its fiduciary responsibility. Corporate entities are legally considered as persons in USA and in most nations. The 'corporate persons' are legally entitled to the rights and liabilities due to citizens as persons.

Economist Milton Friedman writes that corporate executives' "responsibility... generally will be to make as much money as possible while conforming to their basic rules of the society, both those embodied in law and those embodied in ethical custom". Friedman also said, "the only entities who can have responsibilities are individuals ... A business cannot have responsibilities. So the question is, do corporate executives, provided they stay within the law, have responsibilities in their business activities other than to make as much money for their stockholders as possible? And my answer to that is, no, they do not. A multi-country 2011 survey found support for this view among the "informed public" ranging from 30-80%. Duska views Friedman's argument as consequentiality rather than pragmatic, implying that unrestrained corporate freedom would benefit the most in long term. Similarly, author business consultant Peter Drucker observed, "There is neither a separate ethics of business nor is one needed", implying that standards of personal ethics cover all business situations. However, Peter Ducker in another instance observed that the ultimate responsibility of company directors is not to harm. Another view of business is that it must exhibit corporate social responsibility (CSR): an umbrella term indicating that an ethical business must.
